To Prevent Potatoes From Rotting. From Suburban Life.

A sure remedy for preventing potatoes from rotting is to sprinkle slaked lime over them. The lime should be put on immediately after digging, not too thick, but enough to cover them slightly. Potatoes taken out of the ground in wet weather, Fashion Dept. The Star, Wash., D. C. especially if the season has been wet are very apt to rot, but by using the above-mentioned remedy, being careful thave it distributed evenly, you will no suffer any loss from rot, nor consum-any time in going over your crop. A Pleasing Little Gown.

4232.-A pretty style for washing stuffs or challis is shown in the dress sketched. The waist is full and completed by a square yoke and straight gathered skirt. The sleeves may be full length or shorter and we called Asquam the second oldest in the sleeves may be full length or shorter and the neck high or in round outline, as shown. The skirt and bertha are well adapted to wide embroidery and are very attractive made of it, though a fine tucking and edging may serve for yoke and bertha. The waist may be girdled with a soft sash or finished neatly and worn without. In challis the small dress is very charming, narrow ribbon acting as adornment. For the medium size three and seven-eighths the medium size three and seven-eighths lake, which is but seven miles long. yards of twenty-four-inch material are needed.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Leipzig, Germany, has four pieces of fire apparatus driven by storage batteries. These machines are guaranteed to run ighteen and one-half miles on one charge at a rate of fifteen and a half milles an hour. They are all equipped with motors on the front wheels, so that they can turn in the closest quarters. Leipzig is without ills and has excellent streets, so that the

The United States Steel Corporation has ordered thirty-six gas engines, aggregating 144,000 horsepower, which are to be used in the different plants of the corporation. Twenty-five of them will be installed at the new plant at Gary, Ind. These great engines will weigh 1,500,000 each, and their shafts will measure three feet in diameter. A train of 2,300 cars will be required to transport them from the works in Maiwattkee, where they are to be built. The wide use of gas engines by the United States Steel Corporation marks an important step in the progress of steel manufacture in this country, as they are designed to operate upon the hitherto "waste" gas developed by the blast furnaces, thus inaugurating an important economy in steel On thirteen of the largest steam roads in These buses are operated at points where there is some considerable settlement of people away from the main line, and in many respects has been found quite satisfactory. The Great Western Company, for instance, has no fewer than eighty-four of these buses in service at different points along the line. In some cases they are operated by the company, and in other cases contracts are made with individuals. Excellent schedules are maintained in England, and the service is said to be very acceptable to the patrons. A commission representing one of the largest railroad companies in the United States has been investigating this matter, and it is possible that it may be introduced into this country, but those who are acquainted with the details of the matter say that the conditions existing in Varieties. ter say that the conditions existing in England are much more favorable to the success of such a scheme than in this country. The grandest railroad train in the world is that of the Emperor of Germany. It cost $1,000,000 and was three years in the course of construction. The "treasure room"—a unique feature—is constructed on the safe deposit principle, with two large burglar-proof safes.

The First Boys' Camp.

From the Outing Magazine. Which was the first boys' camp? Squam Lake, New Hampshire, is their native heath, at any rate. Here Camp Chocorua was founded by Ernest Balch in 1882. I think that it was the first to exist anywhere. It closed in about 1889, and the boys jointly bought up the island, returning there regularly for a fortnight every summer until the late nineties; the open air chapel on Chocorua Island, its wooded acre of sand and laurel, white birch cross and stone altars, being regularly conse-crated in the Episcopal diocese, still holds out services throughout the summer. In 1891 I first went to Camp Asquam, which had moved to Squam in 1887, from Rindge, N. H., where it was founded by the present Bishop Nichols of Nebraska. At that time, of at least three camps which are direct offsprings of Asquam. Today, five dot the

"In looking back over the events of a checkered career," remarked a round-faced middle-aged man in a downtown hotel yes-terday, "I believe the meanest thing I ever did was while I was a small boy in school. I got another boy to play hookey with me one day. No, there wasn't anything so mean about that. rie didn't have thing so mean about that. He didn't have to do it unless he wanted to. But the joke of it was that I had a note excusing my absence that my father had written for me some time before and which I hadn't turned in. Of course that fixed up my absence on the hookey deal all right, but the other boy had to eat off the family sideboard for an entire week. It was the meanest thing I ever did."
